Biscuits are a cinch when you use your bread machine. Just use the dough setting and this recipe and you're on your way to the perfect homemade biscuit. Yes, you can make biscuits in your bread machine but you have to finish them in the oven on a baking sheet. This is a simple recipe that uses the dough setting on your bread machine to mix, knead and rise the dough. You then roll it out on a floured surface and cut the biscuits using a glass or biscuit cutter if you have one. These biscuits are great for breakfast with a jam or jelly you can also make in your bread machine, and they go great with hearty meals like steaks and stews.

INGREDIENTS: 2/3 cup milk (you can substitute buttermilk if you like), 2 large eggs, 1 1/4 tsp salt.

It adds cheesy richness to rolls, muffins, and bread and can be sprinkled over popcorn or salads. It can even be used to make your own macaroni and cheese or other main dishes. It's great for camping, backpacking, and storage where refrigeration is not available. So in a nutshell, making a cheesy biscuit that rivals those of the Red Lobster is really not rocket science. We simply need a good baking powder biscuit recipe (and you likely have that already) and some cheddar cheese powder. We follow Dennis' guidelines, and we'll be sure to have the best biscuits we've ever locked a lip around! Here's a BIG “Thank you!” to Dennis and The Prepared Pantry for letting us in on what may be a well-kept secret!
